BEERE, Patrick

As a student new to ECU, I see numerous opportunities to advocate on behalf of all students, including those smaller and specialist student groups which often feel they lack either access to or representation at, ECU's decision-making forums. ECU's role as an educator and mentor of students and its capacity to meet statutory corporate governance regulations, including budgetary constraints, are not irreconcilable issues. The student perspective in this process is a critical component to achieving the University's higher education objectives - for each of our campuses.

Without students, our facilities are just office precincts with off-street parking. Our inputs to the decision-making processes which drive and progress ECU, must be advanced with balance, determination, understanding and integrity. My pre-university experience in a variety of public and private roles, together with my present areas of university study, convince me that I can successfully represent your needs and issues. pbeere@student.ecu.edu.au

GARDNER, Tim

Hello constituents! How are you? Do you have any issues with how the university is run? Sometimes large institutions make us feel powerless and our (student) voice often falls on deaf ears. I am willing and able to change that by becoming a student representative on the ECU Council. I am a second year Communications student majoring in Advertising and Public Relations. I am Vice-President of the ECU Public Relations Chapter. I made the honour roll last semester and was previously recognised and awarded as a PIBT highest achiever. I like to be as fully engaged with the University system as I can. I am approachable, succinct and realistic. These qualities are often lacking in political realms and it is these qualities which I will bring to the council. A vote for me is a vote for equality, balance and fairness. Thank you for your time! orange100@helloworld.com 0438 372 001

MILLARD, Karl

I think ECU has enjoyed a really good standing in the community in the past couple of years, and as a result graduates from the university are becoming more recognised and valued in the community. I believe the goals of the council should be to ensure that this trend continues, and that the social and intellectual traits invested in candidates really allow them to outshine their competition and enrich their community.

I'm involved in the schools of Business and Natural Sciences, so I get to see a fair bit of the campus and I like to get to know the people who make it up. The traits I can bring to the position are an ability to see the answers to problems inside or outside the box and then implement the strategies to achieve the outcome which will best benefit my peers and the university. kmillard@student.ecu.edu.au 0421 928 091

CAMERON, Shaun

Hey everyone! My name is Shaun Cameron, and I'm currently studying Psychology/Criminology. I have previously been involved with various ECU volunteer events and programs, and am now running for the University Council. My goals in running for the council are to further student interests and better the experience student's gain from ECU. A vote for me is a vote for students! scamero2@student.ecu.edu.au

CUCOW, Shane

I am running for two core reasons, apart from my passion to make a contribution to the direction of ECU. Firstly, having been an observer to the University Council as Guild President, I have become increasingly aware that the University Council treats these positions as tokenistic representations. Student members on Council should represent what's best for students (the Uni's biggest stakeholders), and be proactive in doing so.

Secondly, I believe it is important to have Guild Representatives on the University Council. Guild reps work with the University committees and with students to find out what's going on, how it affects students, and how they can work to implement change for the benefit of students. They are better set to represent student opinions and interests than one student alone. I promise to be that channel for the Guild, and I will represent students interests to the University Governance. Queries? 0400424933
