

Psychological Services Centre

Who are we?

Edith Cowan University provides psychological services to the community of Perth at a teaching clinic which is located in Joondalup. The clinic is the primary training centre for postgraduate students in the School of Psychology and Social Science at ECU.

These students have degrees in psychology and are undertaking training in specialist areas. Services are provided under the direct supervision of experienced staff members who are specialist psychologists.

What do we offer?

The Psychological Services Centre provides counselling, psychotherapeutic services and psychological assessments to members of the community. Clients may be self-referred, or referred by professionals in the health, legal, educational, employment and other sectors.

Assessment and treatment is available for individuals, groups and families in areas such as:

- anxiety and depression
- stress and lifestyle management
- family therapy and children's behaviour management
- adolescent counselling
- sexual assault, accident and trauma counselling
- behaviour and adjustment disorders
- loss and grief
- anger
- relationship difficulties
- chronic pain or illness
- mediation and conflict resolution
- drug and alcohol problems

Psychometric testing is available:

- diagnosis of ADHD
- intellectual capacity
- learning difficulties
- personality

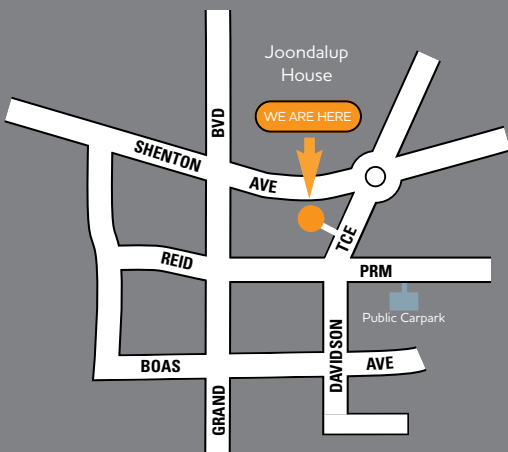

Service fees

Fees range from $10 to $30 per session, depending on employment status. Clients may also opt to see a Centre staff member at professional rates $100 per session.

Operating Hours

The clinic is attended from 8.40am to 4.45pm (last appointment 3.30pm) weekdays and appointments are available Monday to Thursday.
