Lyndall ADAMS

Directors Statement

A big welcome to ECU Galleries 2024 program and what a way to start with the HERENOW curatorial mentoring exhibition for the Fringe World Festival. Professor Ted Snell AM CitWA moved the HERE&NOW exhibition series, established in 2012 at the Lawrence Wilson Art Gallery, to ECU Galleries in 2021. Renamed HERENOW, the series is a mentoring project for aspiring curators, which can be daunting, so to provide that experience and enable an emerging curator to capture the vibrancy across current practice within an area of focus within the visual arts is essential. This is one of the few mentoring programs of its kind in WA. We lost Ted on 23 September 2023. Ted's knowledge of art in general and art in WA in particular cannot be replaced.

For the inaugural exhibition Ted wrote:

HERENOW is a snapshot of current visual arts practice in Perth, right here and right now! Its focus is provided by a young curator keen to develop the complex skills, insights, and sensibilities required to curate an exhibition in a public gallery. Bringing those skills into play and delivering an exhibition that showcases a group of artists whose work they admire and wish to promote is not an easy task. And, it is one that is best achieved by doing, in tandem with professional colleagues. Learning the ropes by taking the strain, setting a course, and tackling the challenges that inevitably arise requires courage, commitment, and guidance. Its multiple facets of operation must be coordinated with intricate care.

ECU Galleries continues Ted's legacy with curatorial mentor Julie Barratt, Director of Art Strategy for DADAA, the largest Arts and Disability organisation in Southeast Asia. She is nationally and globally connected as an artist, curator and disability worker. For both exhibition Julie is mentoring DADAA arts worker Shelley Elkins through the process of curating 13 DADAA artists—Mummy's Agony featuring Marina Psaila in Gallery25 and Artist in Wonderland featuring Alex Cammack, Kelly

Grant, Emma Harradine, Christopher Hummel, Aidan Leahy, Timothy Maley, Esa Nykanen, Brittany Plummer, Brent Stanley, Oliver Max Taylor and Declan White in Spectrum Project Space.

ECU Galleries is guided by our understanding that Art Galleries are significant educative bodies (Clover & Sanford, 2019), they provide “plays of force...[that] influence the public” (Steeds, 2014, p. 29). Exhibitions “actively construct, shape and mobilize our understandings of the world through carefully choreographed” (Clover & Sanford, 2019, p. 65) works of art that shape our collective and individual identities and “draw attention to public memory, the ideological nature of display, the epistemological influence of historical forces, embodied and affective forms of learning beyond language, and historical sites of public discourse” (O’Malley et al., 2020, p. 5).

HERENOW|24: Artists in Wonderland presents an exploration of contrasting styles, concepts and techniques from a diverse group of artists at various points in their artistic journeys. This exhibition invites the viewers into a wonderland of eleven different realms, each illuminating the creator's personality and inspirations.

These wonderful worlds from which each artist lives and creates, divulges a narrative which illustrates and conveys passion, innocence, sentiment and intent to showcase and educate viewers on personal, political and playful themes. Viewers are encouraged to observe and consider the narrative of each work and imagine going down the rabbit hole into the artists own little worlds of wonder.

As the Curator, I had the privilege of collaborating, mentoring and watching each of these artists emerge and develop spectacular arts practices over the span of ten years and serve as a witness to their remarkable artistic journeys. The dedication of artists, demonstrated through years of practice, persistence, and passion for their craft, along with their openness to learning and overcoming obstacles to fulfill their most ambitious dreams, stands as a testament to their skill. Kelly GRANT

Biography

Kelly Grant, born, educated and grew up in the Goldfields of Western Australia. Kelly attributes her quirky sense of humour to her Kalgoorlie life.

Kelly's deep connection to country reflects in the process of her art making. In the art making practice Kelly explores the concept of second life, highlighting these outdated and obsolete items and using them to develop beautiful, intentional, and reflective art pieces.

“Even the most beautiful of things have imperfections, with that in mind, those things, when nurtured can be even more beautiful”.

Kelly is devoted to creating awareness and connection around art and how it can be used as a tool for social change, hence why Kelly has aligned with DADAA for the past six years where she has had a nurturing environment to develop her body of work.

Artwork statement

Knot what it seems #2, 2023
String and found objects, Dimensions variable

This piece explores the paradox of electric vehicles, revealing the irony that while they are hailed as eco-friendly alternatives, their production and usage contribute significantly to wildlife degradation. Through juxtaposing the supposed green image of electric cars with the hidden environmental costs, I'm hoping to provoke reflection on the unintended consequences of our pursuit of sustainable transportation. An unintentional silent killer.

Her work can be seen as a beacon of fun amongst the daily humdrum of modern life, reminding viewers to stop and have fun every once in a while.

Christopher HUMMEL

Biography

Christopher Hummel (aka. 'Graff My Train') is a self-taught, young emerging artist with autism from Perth, Western Australia. He is an extraordinarily prolific artist, completing each acrylic on canvas work with incredible skill, dedication, and attention to detail.

Needless to say, Christopher loves graffitied trains. He sees beauty in graffitied trains where others often do not, and so he has chosen to make them the focus of his creative arts practice.

Each of his confident, energetic strokes in his wild, unfussy renderings are made in the name of paying homage to this muse. His work is deeply embedded in an aesthetic appreciation and nostalgic sentimentality for graffitied trains. It is l'art pour l'art; it exists for its own sake, completely enraptured by their neglected worldly beauty.

Since his first exhibition in 2017, Christopher has established himself in the national arts community, as well as the local graffiti scene with his iconic, award-winning artwork. For every work Christopher has exhibited, he has sold dozens more to collectors, friends, and fans alike, and will undoubtedly sell and exhibit countless more throughout his career.

Christopher continues to paint every day, paying tribute to the trains, graffiti art, and graffiti artists he loves so much. He plans to paint, exhibit, and sell many more artworks in the years to come and has bigger plans to someday see the graffitied trains of the world for himself.

Artist's statement

"Hullo There! I'm Christopher Hummel and I have autism. I'm an artist slash graffiti artist who paints pictures of trains with graffiti on them."

Brittany PLUMMER

Biography

Twenty six year old Brittany Plummer is an emerging artist from Perth's Northern Suburbs. Born and raised in Perth, Western Australia, Brittany has been engaging in the arts since she was a young child. With a supportive and loving family Brittany has been encouraged to pursue and practice her art interests for many years and remembers fondly the time dad was renovating the house and allowed Brittany and her sister Jackie to draw all over the walls.

Brittany continued her arts practice throughout primary and high school and went on to study art at Leederville TAFE for two years. Following the conclusion of TAFE, Brittany sought out other avenues to further develop her arts practice and connected with DADAA in 2015. Brittany began at DADAA in the dance and performance group called On Track. Here she explored performing arts and made many meaningful friendships and connections with fellow performers many of whom she still thinks of fondly to this day. About a year later, Brittany expanded her participation with DADAA to include mixed media and Visual Arts workshops which came naturally to her from her many years of prior art and drawing experience. Here she has established herself as an immensely prolific illustrator creating countless artworks over the years.

In 2017 Brittany was awarded a Nexus Arts Grant for Artists with an Intellectual Disability. Working with a professional Arts Mentor, Brittany debuted her first solo exhibition, '21' and was held at her old highschool, John XXII College. Brittany's exhibition was a huge success and resulted in a high volume of sales. In 2022 Brittany decided to put a pause on performing arts to explore some new areas of interest primarily ceramics and pottery and has since been exploring and learning all aspects of hand building and ceramic sculpting. Between Brittany's drawing and ceramic practice she has continued to build an impressive body of work and maintain her unique style and approach to art making.

Artist's statement

Brittany's Illustrative style almost always depicts emotive figures and characters. Brittney manages to capture her style both in 2d and 3d, utilizing expressive line work, harsh contours and a sense of movement. Brittany's fast approach, fluid strokes and sense of urgency results in intricate, sometimes messy but beautiful complex renderings of her favourite people, movie characters, cartoon characters, musicians, and voices. Rarely does Brittany include other subject matter unless it directly relates to the character she is interpreting. Brittany demonstrates an almost carefree approach to her art making, working back into works, over top of works and sometimes even deleting or erasing works. This ephemeral quality to her work adds a sense of danger to her practice as it is never guaranteed to see the next day.

I have exhibited in As We Are for many years receiving a high commendation in 2017. In 2017, I had a solo painting exhibition Nature vs Magic at Guildford Potters through a Nexus Grant from DADAA that enabled me to develop my creative style and direction.

Artist's statement

I love colour and the feel of fabric. This costume is inspired by the colour and shape in my paintings of mandalas. I love sparkle and glitter which comes from my obsession with Disney animations, especially the ball gowns. Making costumes for my large collection of Barbie Dolls continues to inspire me. This is the second costume I have designed and made on a human scale.

Oliver Max TAYLOR

His works centre discussions of gender, sexual expression, and disability; drawing upon his own experiences alongside investigation of societal norms and values. Through humour and a childlike whimsy, Taylor seeks to delight as much as he seeks to confront, balancing serious conversations with a sense of joy and curiosity. He is particularly interested in the relationship art creates between artist, art, and audiences, with works often utilising visual and textual metaphors that carry double-meanings or are left open to interpretation.

Declan WHITE

Biography

Declan White is a young artist whose career began at DADAA in Western Australia in 2017. In the early stages of his practice, Declan worked out of DADAA's Midland studios where he established his practice. In recent years, Declan has spent some time living abroad but has now returned home and is currently residing and practicing out of Perth's Southern suburbs and DADAA's Fremantle studios.

Declan has a very unique abstract quality to his art. His illustrative approach and attention to detail provide for extremely intricate designs composed of geometric shapes, patterns, bold lines and blocks of colour. Declan's preferred mediums include pencil and markers, however has also been known to use paint for larger scale and simpler works. With such intricate designs, pencils and markers allow for increased precision and application in his practice. Declan is a very visual Artist. He most often draws from references and still life. Declan will intensely study a subject and draw what he sees which rarely reflects what others see, resulting in one-of-a-kind characterized, abstract interpretations of the subject. Declan's subjects are often derived from nature, including plants and animals.

Declan has had many achievements in his relatively short career so far. Declan has received two Nexus Arts Grants in 2018 and 2019, a grant for emerging artists with a disability. During which time Declan worked alongside professional Arts Mentor Yvonne Zago to further develop his concepts and practice. Following this mentorship Declan exhibited in a Solo show at Fremantle and Lancelin. In 2019 Declan was among a small group of artists invited to Exhibit in the Joondalup Invitation Art Prize. Other exhibitions Declan has been exhibited in include; Treasured at the Wanneroo Art Centre, Catapult One at Gallery Central, Menagerie at Guildford Village Potters and DADAA's annual In Focus Exhibitions from 2018 to 2020 at the Midland Junction Art Centre.

Declan currently has Multiple Artworks in the City of Swan and DADAA art collections. Most recently Declan was the artist in residence at the 2023 Awesome International Arts Festival.

HERENOW|24:Mummy's Agony

showcases the creative work of Marina PSAILA

Curator | Shelley ELKINS

Curatorial Mentor | Julie BARRATT

Marina's artworks "reflect her dreams of white witches and the prodigal son". This exhibition focuses on the first aspect. The artworks are an expression of how she sees herself when she looks in the mirror "I look cool, hot, Marina's on a spiritual journey". Having a room with her wallpapers and her artwork symbolize "freedom" of self-expression and shows the world who she thinks she is.

Curatorial Statement

HERENOW | 24: Mummy's Agony is the inaugural solo exhibition by emerging Perth artist Marina Psaila. Psaila, an eccentric and vibrant personality, explores themes of profound meaning to her such as dreams, childbirth, nature, identity and religion. Psaila also traverses themes of seemingly trivial subjects such as butterflies, birds, goldfish and everything else. This exhibition offers viewers a glimpse into Psaila's chaotic world of whimsy, colour, confusion, love, trauma, happiness, fixation and creativity, weaving a never-ending story of who Marina Psaila is. The answer to this question is subject to daily transformation.

Psaila invites viewers into her chaotic and compelling world and encourages contemplation of her work. Although not immediately evident Psaila's practice stems from a lifetime of pivotal and life altering events which changed the trajectory of her life, shaping her arts practice. Once an aspiring fashion designer Psaila has now found her place in contemporary art and proudly shares her innermost feelings for the world to see.

As the curator of this exhibition, I welcome viewers into this sacred space and invites viewers to look beyond the surface, open their minds and hearts to provide the context for experiencing this exhibition. Consider Psaila's journey while engaging with the profound layers of Mummy's Agony.
