

PhD Scholarships

Nursing & Midwifery

Are you thinking of furthering your career with a research degree and solving real world problems? ECU is seeking PhD candidates to undertake research in Nursing & Health and Community Care

Project Areas:

We have scholarships for projects in the areas of Healthy Ageing: Improving outcomes for Older Adults and End of Life Care. Registration as a nurse is preferred, but not essential. Understanding of healthcare systems is essential.

The Centre for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Services Research hosts the research activity for the School and our research programs have consistently been assessed as being above world standard through the Excellence in Research for Australia framework. Our research in the fields of chronic disease management, child and family health, older adults, workforce and health services are recognised as innovative and relevant to national and international audiences. We collaborate with world-class researchers, industry leaders and clinical experts in the development, conduct and application of our research in our drive to conduct high quality research with real world impact.

How to Apply:

This scholarship is open to individuals who are prospective and current ECU students. To be eligible, applicants must apply online at www.ecu.edu.au/future-students/applying for an ECU Higher Degree by Research course and have been made an unconditional offer. If you have submitted an application for course entry and have not yet been issued an offer, you can apply for this scholarship and your application will be assessed conditional on achieving minimum requirements.
